Beyazıt Fire Tower is located in the garden of Istanbul University and was used as a watch tower for sighting the outbreak of fires. Built of wood in 1749, it was damaged, paradoxically, by fire and then torn down. It was rebuilt in 1878 by the edict of Sultan Mahmud II. The architect was Senekerim Balyan. The 85 meter tower has a roof made of stone and a wooden staircase. It is still used as a watchtower today as well as for gathering meteorological data. You can take photos of Istanbul from different perspectives. The tour will be exhaustive, because the tower has 180 high steps and there is not any resting place. Despite of the mighty climbing, you will never regret. The final, top of the tower is fascinating.

EDUCATION AND THE BODY

CHICAGO • AUGUST 17-20, 2016

International Standing Conference on the History of Education (ISCHE)

August 17–20, 2016

Loyola University Chicago

The 38th International Standing Conference on the History of Education (ISCHE) will be held August 17-20, 2016, at Loyola University Chicago. With the conference theme “Education and the Body,” ISCHE 38 invites historical scholarship that examines the material and discursive positioning of human bodies in education; educational practices of embodiment; as well as metaphorical uses of the concepts of “body” and “bodies” in relation to education.

ISCHE 38 aims to generate a set of sustained conversations amongst historians of education from across the globe on education in relation to the body. Conference participants are asked to consider how a focus on the body offers us new perspectives into the development of educational patterns and institutions. The consideration of bodies—on multiple axes and levels—also prompts us to rethink our understanding of the individual and social experiences of education and schooling. The 2016 ISCHE conference theme challenges us to examine how difference has historically been created between different bodies, as well as how different bodies have moved and have been shaped to move in the history of education.

CONFERENCE THEMES

1. Regulating bodies
2. Embodiment in education
3. Gendered, sexualized, raced, and class bodies in the history of education
4. Bodies in and across space and place
5. Dis/ability in the history of education
6. Mediated and hybrid bodies
7. Working, thinking, and feeling bodies
8. Body as metaphor
